Whitehall Antiques 36th Summer Seminar Series: July 11th-16th, 2018

An ideal learning environment for collectors, appraisers and dealers alike. You'll learn insider tips and trade secrets from nationally-known experts in all-day sessions featuring hands-on, object oriented instruction coupled with illustrated lectures and stimulating Q&A discussions.

Appraisers receive 14 education units for re-certification per seminar. See you there!

Testimonials:

"These seminars are my favorite place to learn—small group sizes and lots of individual and hands-on attention make them the best around"

"Knowledgeable and engaging lecturers presenting lots of information with real-world application."

Our Lecturers (for biographical details go to www.WhitehallAntiques.com):

Dr. Daphne Rosenzweig, Ph.D., ISA CAPP, author, professor, museum exhibition organizer and consultant, and certified appraiser

Dr. Oscar Fitzgerald, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., historian, author (just published: American Furniture 1650 to the Present), and faculty member Smithsonian Institution/George Washington University's Master's program in Decorative Arts & Design History.

David and Elizabeth Lindquist, co-owners of Whitehall Antiques, Chapel Hill, NC. Lecturers, authors & antiques consultants.

July 11th-12th: Japanese Decorative Arts, 1800-Present

Presented by Dr. Daphne Rosenzweig

Beloved and avidly collected by Americans and Europeans, the decorative arts of later Japan are found in many collections, from private homes to major museums. Ceramics, netsuke, tea wares, bronzes, gilded furniture for export and other arts are staples of auctions, estate sales and flea markets!

This two-day seminar introduces some of the major decorative arts from the mid-Edo period through the current, Heisei, period. They will be placed in their cultural and historic contexts, exploring marks, materials, values, quality, provenance, masters, wares produced for export taste vs. those for the home audience, and other issues. Note: the course does not examine Japanese prints and paintings (subjects which are introduced in seminars elsewhere).

A workbook will be provided, and there will be hands-on examination of objects. You are encouraged to bring several objects to be discussed!

July 13th-14th: Modernism in American Furniture, 1880-1980

Presented by Dr. Oscar Fitzgerald

The effervescent Oscar Fitzgerald, PhD, will once again share his remarkable insight into American furniture, this time exploring Modernism (1900-1980) and its antecedents, as well as, exploring the great Studio Furniture Movement of the 20th century. From the development of the forms called “modern” to the woods used, the techniques used (mechanical and hand), the great companies, and the brilliant designers, all will be explored. Value and condition issues will be explored, value issues augmented by David and Elizabeth Lindquist. Pieces from the Whitehall Modernism Gallery will be available to add a hands-on element to the course. Dr. Fitzgerald’s latest book will be available for advanced orders and signing: American Furniture, 1650 to the Present. Praise for the book notes his special attention to authentication and to preservation. Leading scholars with advance copies call it “an indispensable reference”.

Oscar in true professorial style breaks the days into short, insightful bites making it easy to refer to notes when wanting to use the information. These will include: 19th Century Antecedents, Biedermeier to Bauhaus; Aesthetic and Arts and Crafts Movements; Art Deco and Art Modern; Mid Century Modern; Later 20th Century Modernism and Studio Furniture.

July 15th-16th: Identify, Authenticate, and Value Furniture from 1740-1840

Presented by David Lindquist & Elizabeth Lindquist

David and Elizabeth Lindquist, two of America’s most respected antiques dealers, will lead the group through a careful analysis of furniture identification, authentication, and evaluation (aesthetically and monetarily). While the antiques market remains tumultuous, it is clear that brown furniture is in the midst of a major resurgence, especially 1740-1840 furniture. And prices are at a historically high level post 2008.

This course will explore quality and style issues; authentication by tool marks, affects of time on seen and hidden surfaces, and the progression of hardware and its telltale marks. Woods used and what they reveal will be carefully examined, including some of the keys to correct identification of woods. This naturally folds into separating period pieces from later 19th and 20th century copies.

Class handouts will be a significantly useful take-away from this course. Most valuable, pieces will be thoroughly examined in small groups guided by David and Elizabeth. They will show you what they see in multiple pieces and periods and what that tells them. Past students have called this the most valuable experience in understanding antique furniture they have ever experienced.
